There's a good chance that a number of farmers will get caught short on fertilizer this spring.

Phosphate in particular is going to be in limited supply. The reason is that phosphate producers have found that they can sell their product overseas at around $8 above domestic prices. The smart operator is going to determine his fertilizer needs, place his order and get it delivered for later spreading.

Most Appomattox soils are low in phosphate, therefore it's urgent that all operators determine their needs now.

The soils testing lab at V.P.I. has tested over 60,000 samples since July 1. Today, there are two weeks behind. We still urge soil sampling and realize that for many crops it's good to be seeded now. We are glad to discuss fertility needs with any grower.

Some of the food chains and media seem to be out to make the farmer as the main villain in the rise of food prices. We need to be fully aware of the fact whether you are a farmer or consumer.

The American consumer over the past 40 years have paid out a lesser and less of their disposable income for food. In 1929 23.4% of consumer's income went for food. Compare this with 1971 when only 16.3% of the income went for food. The highest year was 1947 when it reached 25.7%. We look at beef since its been the most publicity. In 1950 there were 24.9 million head of beef cows on U. S. farms and the per capita consumption was 85 pounds. In 1971 there were 37.6 million beef cows and the per capita consumption had rose to 114.5 pounds. This is a 51% increase in numbers and a 39% increase in per capita consumption. Figure how much the population has increased since 1955 and you see, I how it's up. There were more "per capita" beef and they were eating more and ever increasing rate. I remember as a young boy when my mother say when we go to the county fair "I had a hot dog because they cost more". This situation today we have more money and we spend it for what we want.

It's significant to point out that our taste are changing in regard to the quality of beef we buy. In 1950 41 percent of our beef was sold in a choice of better grade; 26% graded either utility, canner or cutter. In 1970 we sold 63% of our beef in the choice or better grades and only 13% was utility or less.

Lets also take a look at who is producing our food. In 1950 there were 9.9 million farm workers last year this figure was down to 4.2 million. Percentagewise this is 135% drop in 21 years.

Here's how it looks from where I sit - there are more people eating more beef of a higher quality, produced by fewer people and bought by a consuming public that demands more and more services before it gets into the market basket.

One more thought - - - Production expenses have risen from 23.3 billion dollars in 1957 to 40.9 billion in 1970. That's a 75% increase in 14 years. Where's the mad rush to get into beef production? Isn't that where the money is?
